We believe at POINT that the best solutions to support the people in crisis should be by a quick transformation from rapid response to resilience method, as this approach within humanitarian operations is crucial to the first efforts of a community to recover, rise again, and start to use their capacity, starting from education and livelihood at the first stages, ending by early recovery and rehabilitation at later stages.

POINT CLUSTERS

01 | Early recovery and livelihood (ERL)

This program is designed to mitigate the causes of poverty which are complex and can include political, social, economic, and environmental factors that often create barriers for poor households. Addressing these barriers to economic empowerment within a community not only strengthen their ability to succeed in the short term but also help them to become more resilient in the face of unexpected disasters. This program has tailored tools and strategies to target camps, urban, and rural areas. POINT is working closely with the communities by using a community-based approach to support their resources and providing them with new resources to mitigate poverty, sustain the market chains, and focus on innovative solutions. Rehabilitation interventions for the targeted areas are one of ERL program's approaches to create sustainable solutions for the beneficiaries to access the markets, build up the market capacity, and support the economy of areas in engineering to make income-generating projects, in addition to ensure safer and easy to access basic services especially PWDs. in addition, rehab intervention can also protect beneficiaries by rehabilitating solutions for their houses, roads, or WASH facilities to mitigate the risks for them and do no harm. Social cohesion intervention is designed to empower communities to lead early recovery processes together to foster local leadership and social cohesion through formation of inclusive community committees. These committees receives training in leadership and management, enabling them to drive community initiatives and sustain positive outcomes beyond the project's lifespan. With the mainstreaming of gender issues, POINT includes women empowerment components in its programs to support women for a greater role in empowering targeted areas.

This Programs encompass a range of activities and interventions aimed at ensuring access to sufficient, safe, and nutritious food for all people, while also promoting sustainable livelihoods and economic development. The importance of the FSL sector cannot be overstated, as it plays a critical role in several areas such as increasing access to an adequate and nutritious food supply, helping vulnerable populations to improve their livelihoods through sustainable practices, income-generating activities, and access to markets, providing strategies to enhance communities by diversifying livelihoods, implementing climate-smart agriculture, and building food reserves, communities can better withstand and recover from these challenges.

03 | Protection

The main approach of these programs is community-based mainstreaming and capacity development. All activities pursue to ensuring full respect for the rights of the individual in accordance with the letter and spirit of the relevant bodies of law (i.e. human rights law, international humanitarian law, and refugee laws).

Furthermore, POINT shares experience with cluster and working groups and any other formal approaches to participate effectively in decision-making for establishing new sites/- camps by mapping and verification processes to support the local actors to establish sites that match the CCCM Toolkit and SPHERE standards. Moreover, community participation is one of the targeted objectives in POINT's strategy to enhance their participation and achieve their ownership of projects, POINT does that through multi-interventions specifically capacity development, cash grants to implement projects by camp committees to the camp residents. POINT cares to design its interventions in the camps in collaboration with camp committees and involve them in implementation and consider their recommendations for activities such as rehabilitation of roads, maintenance of the schools or WASH facilities...etc.

05 | Education

POINT's intervention in the education sector aims to strengthen educational communities by integrating humanitarian education standards and fostering inclusive learning environments. The program focuses on enhancing the quality and accessibility of education for all children, with a particular emphasis on school rehabilitation, capacity building for educators, and the provision of essential learning resources. ## OCHA DELEGATION VISITS

On September 23, 2024, a delegation led by David Carden, Deputy Regional Humanitarian Coordinator for the Syrian Crisis, along with Rosa Crestani, Head of the WHO Field Office, and Georgios Alexadratos, Head of the Humanitarian Financing Unit at OCHA, visited the northern countryside of Aleppo in northwest Syria. The group also included senior officials from the United Nations Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs (OCHA) and the World Health Organization (WHO). The purpose of their visit was to advocate for greater humanitarian support, particularly in addressing the region's most pressing needs.

The visit aimed to draw attention to the worsening humanitarian situation in northwest Syria, particularly the impact of funding cuts, especially in the livelihood sector. The delegation advocated for increased global funding and sustained support for cross-border humanitarian efforts, with an emphasis on projects that promote economic recovery and community resilience. The success of initiatives funded by the Syria Cross-border Humanitarian Fund (SCHF), which have empowered local communities and created sustainable job opportunities, was also highlighted.

During the visit, the delegation engaged directly with beneficiaries to better understand their challenges, gather feedback on the services provided, and assess the impact of POINT Organization's interventions. This hands-on approach helped identify areas that require further assistance.

In addition to meeting with beneficiaries, the delegation explored innovative solutions to overcome access challenges and improve the resilience of affected communities. One of the key objectives of the visit was to bolster OCHA's advocacy efforts by raising awareness of urgent humanitarian needs, identifying service delivery gaps, and discussing strategies for resource mobilization to enhance the effectiveness of ongoing humanitarian responses.

Mrs. Manal Ows Turning Pain into a Driving Force for Success

Recognizing these challenges, POINT, with funding from SCHF, launched a six-month vocational training project, concluding in May 2024. Through this initiative, Manal participated in tailoring training, where she learned essential skills that prepared her for the job market.

The program also included Small and Medium Enterprise (SME) Management Training, equipping her with financial planning and business management knowledge. With an $800 grant, she was able to purchase equipment and launch her own small tailoring business. She is one of 25 women who received similar grants through this initiative.

Achieving Financial Independence and Renewed Confidence

Thanks to the support of POINT and SCHF, Manal now operates a successful business, providing for her family while expanding her customer base. “This opportunity gave me financial stability and self-confidence. I am grateful to POINT and SCHF for empowering me to take control of my future,” she says.

Conclusion: Investing in Women's Economic Growth

Manal's transformation highlights the impact of SCHF-funded projects implemented by POINT in empowering displaced women. However, many women still lack access to training and financial resources to rebuild their lives. Expanding investment in vocational training and small business grants is key to fostering resilience and self-sufficiency. With continued support, more women like Manal can gain financial independence and contribute to their communities.

Mr. Mohammed Yaseen

A Journey from Hardship to Opportunity

“After losing my father, I had no idea how I would support my family. Now, I have my own workshop and a future I can build on.”

Mohammad Yaseen Munther Abdul Latif, a high school student from Jisr al-Shughour, was forced to take on family responsibilities after losing his father in the war. With no stable income and limited job opportunities, he struggled to provide for his household.

The Challenge: Searching for Stability

Every day was a struggle for Mohammad, who needed to balance his education with finding a way to earn a living. Without technical skills or business knowledge, his options were severely limited.

The Role of POINT and SCHF in Vocational Training

Through a five-month vocational training program funded by SCHF and implemented by POINT, Mohammad gained motorcycle repair skills, a profession in high demand in his region. The program combined theoretical lessons with hands-on workshop training, ensuring he developed both technical expertise and practical experience.

Following this, he was selected for Small Business Management Training, where he learned financial planning and marketing. With a $1,500 grant, Mohammad opened his own motorcycle repair shop, which now provides a stable income and allows him to support his family. He is one of 22 young trainees who received similar business grants.

Building a Business and a Community

Today, Mohammad's shop is thriving, and he is even training other young men in his community. “POINT and SCHF gave me a chance when I needed it most. Now, I am not just working—I am helping others build their futures too.”

Conclusion: The Importance of Investing in Youth

Mohammad's success is a clear example of how SCHF-funded vocational training by POINT helps young people transition from uncertainty to stability. However, many more youths still lack access to similar opportunities.

Supporting vocational education and small business grants is essential for empowering youth. Expanding these programs will enable more young people like Mohammad to achieve financial independence and contribute to their communities.
